
sound scientific evidence for the virus?

Hi Mikki,

I hope this finds you well :)

I've been investigating claims of "viruses" and was wondering if you have any sound scientific evidence for the existence of "SARS-COV-2", and if so would you please cite it or share it with me? You seem to be well connected in the health freedom community and trying to unite people, so I thought you'd be a natural person to ask since proof of the virus would certainly help to unite everyone. Also you have a "covid-19" protocol on your home page.

One other question: I saw a recent Plandemic video called "Our Birthright" where you were talking about the importance of freedom and urging unity in the health freedom movement. It almost sounded like you want everyone to unite under one narrative for the sake of freedom, i.e. go along with the "virus" story. Did I get that wrong? Or are you suggesting that people not exercise their freedom of speech, for the sake of achieving freedom?

We can all value freedom AND disagree with, and even criticize and challenge each other. In fact, that is part of our birthright as well. We have the freedom to do those things, and we need to exercise that freedom. We need to call each other out when wrong, and expect "experts" to be able to evidence their claims. We need to challenge, for example, the blatant pseudoscience of virology. It's the core premise of all things "covid" - including the unscientific fear-mongering around "gain of function" and "lab leak" narratives. Otherwise, we'll be in part to blame for the ongoing horrific harm - both voluntary and coerced - that occurs in the name of imaginary "deadly viruses". This weaponized pseudoscience has been plaguing humanity for >100 years and countless lives have been lost as a result.

Thanks and best wishes,
Christine

Hi Mikki,

I hope this finds you well.

It's been a month, so I thought I'd follow up with you regarding scientific evidence of "the virus".

My colleagues and I certainly wouldn't want to mislead anyone, so if you have valid evidence it's really important that you share it. 215 institutions in 40 countries have already been asked and no one has been able to provide or cite any.

Cheers,
Christine

Hi Mikki,

I hope this finds you well.

It's been another month, so I thought I'd follow up with you again regarding scientific evidence of "the virus". Are you able to share any?

Cheers,
Christine

Hello Christine. This is the first message I've seen from you as I've been mostly offline for the past several months.

The debate between terrain and germ theory is not my fight. The scientists I trust and redirect the must have all told me that the truth rests somewhere in the middle.

I'm focused on what I feel is the bigger picture. That is, what all the "virus" crap is used to advance- the complete takeover of our liberties and lives.

Sorry I can't help you on this one. Let me know what you discover!

M

Hi Mikki,

Thanks for getting back to me.

I'm not actually discussing terrain theory. What I say, and think virtually everyone can agree on, is that many things contribute to ill health. The question is whether or not the dogma around "viruses" is actually backed up by valid evidence.

I've been researching this topic for the last 3+ years and what I discovered is that the so-called science underpinning "viruses" is shockingly laughable. Virologists always rely on circular/backwards reasoning and make wild leaps of logic. They don't even have purified samples of their purported viruses to use as valid independent variables in any controlled experiments. You probably know about the huge FOI collection that verifies this, especially for "SARS-COV-2" (I'll include the links below).

The logic of virology is akin to finding presents under a Christmas tree and concluding that Santa obviously put them there.

On top of that, they carry out horrific, useless and invalid animal experiments in an attempt to convince themselves and everyone else that they've successfully tested their hypotheses.

Since "viruses" are said to be specific tiny particles, they have either been shown to exist or they haven't. There really is no middle ground, much as some are trying to cling to some remnant of this dogma. The fact is that all attempts to prove contagion of a respiratory illness (including Spanish flu, with experiments that would be considered unethical today) failed completely! There is literally nothing there. No scientific evidence of contagion, and no valid science showing any particles fitting the definition of a virus. It's a complete house of cards, and it distracts from all the real causes of illness and how to get and stay healthy.

It's truly nothing more than a pseudoscientific cover story that serves many harmful agendas.

As you stated, all the "virus" crap is used to advance the complete takeover of our freedom and lives. And there are already warnings that the next "pandemic" will be even more extreme. This is in addition to the ongoing harm of the last 100+ years via both coerced and voluntary responses to purported "viruses". This is why it's such an important topic. When people realize the laughable nature of virology (and germ and contagion dogma more generally), they can no longer be manipulated through fear of a nonexistent health threat.

This knowledge - which is actually not complicated and can be understood by anyone - empowers people to make better choices for themselves and their families, and helps them recognize that we've all been horrifically lied to and are being steered towards a very unpleasant social order (to put it mildly).

And so, it's very important that we question and require valid evidence from the trusted scientists who tell us otherwise. If they can't supply it, they don't deserve our trust and they are actually doing a disservice in this particular area. Giving them a platform to make unsubstantiated claims leads us deeper into that unpleasant social order.

Once again, thanks for responding, and all the best.

p.s. Sorry, I forgot to include the FOI links; here they are:

Freedom of Information Responses reveal that health/science institutions around the world (216 and counting!) have no record of SARS-COV-2 (the alleged covid virus) isolation/purification, anywhere, ever: <https://www.fluoridefreepeel.ca/fois-reveal-that-health-science-institutions-around-the-world-have-no-record-of-sars-cov-2-isolation-purification/> FOIs reveal that health/science institutions have no record of any "virus" having been found in a host and isolated/purified. Because virology isn't a science: <https://www.fluoridefreepeel.ca/fois-reveal-that-health-science-institutions-have-no-record-of-any-virus-having-been-isolated-purified-virology-isnt-a-science/> Do virologists perform valid control experiments?
